However, when I deploy this to the server (IIS 6, Windows Server 2008), it gives this error: The SMTP server requires a secure connection or the client was not authenticated. The server response was: 5.5.1 Unauthenticated client It seems that the.NET 3.5 framework cannot send emails (I know this is not true, this is just what I am seeing in IIS). I have done a bunch of searches to see what I might be able to do to make this work, and everyone says to install the smtp and aspnet_regiis.exe tools, but when I do this, I still get the same error. EDIT I have installed the smtp tools on the server, and I am able to set the default SMTP server. However, I am still seeing the error. My smtp account has full access to it's network, and it's accessible from the outside, so this isn't the problem. This has everything to do with my VS2008 project. A: If you can test the project in a different web server than IIS, that would be the first thing I'd do. IIS is a powerful server, but there are some odd quirks to it when it comes to SMTP. Your configuration looks good, though. Edit: The error message you are seeing means that the SMTP server you are trying to connect to requires the connection to be authenticated. That is, someone has to be aware that your PC exists and that you are trying to send emails through it to the server. The solution is to give either your PC or your web server (IIS) the name and password of a user with access to that SMTP server. The user name 9df0af710a
